Empire Notes.

Empire, Nov. 16, 1893.

There has been nothing worth writing about since my last letter, excepting a case that has been pending in the Justice Court since about the 6th of September. It was dismissed at the request of the District Attorney on the 10th inst.

It was the case of the State of Nevada vs. Chas. Maher charged by F. Miller with malicious mischief. I was too much interested in the case to write it up.

The Midwinter Fair and Wiggins' turkey shoot and Masquerade Ball are the all absorbing topics of the port of entry at present. Wiggins has the several ranges measured off, and he is building a pontoon bridge across the river so that anyone who wants to can measure the turkey range.

He expects to have his hall illuminated with forty incandescent lights on the night of the ball and he intends to run a line over to the turkey range so if anybody wants to shoot at night they will have good light to shoot by.

Arthur Morris is getting out a block of marble at his quarry 8x4x2 feet, which he is going to ship to the Midwinter Fair. The marble is pure white and experts have pronounced it equal to the finest Italian marble.

Your correspondent will ship to the Fair a whole nut pine tree, petrified. The tree is about 8 inches through at the large end and 12 feet long.

Judge Lang will send a pair of ducks Mr. and Mrs. Jumbo. They are about as large as Canadian honker geese.

Empire will make a little showing at the Fair.

NEIL MAHER.

Standing up for His Rights.

"Accuse the editor that takes in the society items!" inquired the caller, an undersized man, with a timid, appealing look on his face.

"Yes, sir," replied the young man at the desk, "I can take in any kind of items. What have you?"

"Why, it's this way," said the caller lowering his voice, "my wife gave a swell party last night, and I'm willing to pay to have this written up of the affair put in your paper."

"We don't charge anything for society items," observed the young man at the desk, taking the proffered manuscript and looking it over.

"That's alright," was the reply. "You don't understand. I wrote this up myself, and I put in a line or two that says: 'Mr. Halfstick assisted his distinguished wife in receiving the guests.' That's the way I want it to go in, and I don't care if it costs a dollar a line. I want my friends to know, by George, that I still belong to the family!"—Grass Valley Tidings.

Fratricide.

Parkburg, W. Va., November 18. —Down at Lee Creek David and Bradford Amos, brothers and well-to-do farmers, had a disagreement a few days ago, but the affair was believed to have been amicably settled. Bradford Amos came here yesterday and got drunk, and started home threatening to kill his brother.

Before the brother could be warned Bradford came up to him and began cutting and stabbing him on the arms, back, head, neck and breast, inflicting terrible wounds. David tried to run, but could not. Then he picked up a heavy stone and struck Bradford on the head, crushing his skull and fatally injuring him.

Too Realistic.

New York, November, 18.—Four jockies were seriously injured on the stage of the American Theatre last night in the racing scene of the fourth act of "The Prodigal Daughter." Realism is carried to a degree that caused the faces of men in the audience to pale and women to shriek in terror. Four horses went down in a bunch on the right upper entrance of the stage, with three struggling boys beneath them, on whose faces and bodies the hoofs of the excited animals beat mercilessly. Another boy was pitched to the center of the stage and fell unconscious.
